

Proceedings of the Fourteenth National Symposium on Doctoral Research in Social Work

April 20, 2002
The Ohio State University
College of Social Work

Stillman Hall
Ohio State University Campus
Columbus, Ohio

Table of Contents

Foreword.....	ii
Keynote Address	1
Security of Attachment of Infants in Foster Care	12
Factors Related To Psychiatric Hospitalization and Repeated Crisis Service Use By Dually-Diagnosed Persons.....	24
An Examination of Factors Influencing College Students' Self-Reported Likelihood of Calling for Assistance for A Fellow Student Who Has Engaged In High-Risk Alcohol Consumption	29
The Guatemalan Refugees Twenty Years Later: Mental Health in Mayan Communities in Chiapas, Mexico	39
The Early Development and Pilot Testing Of A Case Management Intervention with Victims of Stalking: An Evaluation Study.....	46
The Bowenian Concept Of Triangulation And Its Relationship To Separation Anxiety Disorder.....	54
Highlights of the Fourteenth National Symposium on Doctoral Research in Social Work ...	63
Appendix.....	0

Foreword

On April 20, 2002, The Ohio State University College of Social Work hosted the 14th annual Doctoral Symposium, continuing the rich tradition of disseminating high quality, new research in the profession. These Proceedings showcase the dissertation research that was presented at this unique forum.

This year's keynote speaker, Jean W. Anastas, Ph.D., Associate Professor/Academic Dean, Director, Ph.D. Program, New York University, began our symposium by addressing "Why Epistemology Matters" to the faculty, practitioners, and recent Ph.D. recipients who were present. Her thoughtful remarks on the nature of knowledge and how knowledge develops are ideas that can be applied to anyone in the social work field, whether your role is that of scholar or teacher.

In addition, six recent graduates of social work programs throughout the country were invited to share their research at the symposium. The abstracts in the following pages illustrate the rich diversity of research being conducted by doctoral students and the variety of doctoral programs in North America. Their dissertation research will certainly serve as models for future scholarship, fostering knowledge building in the field of social work.

To all those who took part in the 2002 Symposium, we express our sincere thanks. We offer these Proceedings to the constantly expanding knowledge base that influences the social work profession.

Tony Tripodi, DSW
Dean, College of Social Work
The Ohio State University